VISITORS WELCOME

A new visitors center, opened by the National Park Service, now graces the Minidoka National Historic Site in Jerome. The doors to the National Park Service Visitor Center swung open in February of 2020, showcasing the building's ranger information desk, gift shop, theater and exhibition space. Once travelers visit the gift shop and have all of their questions answered, the outdoors await. Just outside the center are numerous recreational opportunities, from hiking and camping to wildlife viewing. Visitors are welcome to tour the Minidoka National Historic Site itself, which served as an internment camp for West Coast Japanese-American citizens from 1942-1945, after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor and plunged the U.S. into World War II. At one point, approximately 13,000 Japanese-Americans were incarcerated and housed at Minidoka, and several exhibits educate visitors on the relocation camp.

MINIDOKA NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE

GO: From the Twin Falls Visitor Center, take US 93 North to go east on Fall City Road, then Idaho 25 East to Hunt Road. 17 miles; approximately 25 minutes.

BASICS: A peaceful yet relatively stark landscape for this region sets an appropriate, reflective tone at this site of a former detention center for Japanese Americans relocated during the last three years of World War II.

At the Herrett Center for Arts & Science, you can travel to a black hole or the ends of the earth. See tools and artifacts used by some of America's earliest peoples. Marvel at the majesty of the night sky. Since 1980, the Herrett Center has inspired generations of adults and kids alike through its unique collection of art and science. Located on the College of Southern Idaho campus, the Herrett Center is open Tuesday-Saturday. Gallery admission is always free. Visit herrett.csi.edu or call (208) 732-6655 for more information.
